A researcher and social commentator, Celia Lashlie worked for 15 years within the New Zealand Prison Service, starting as the first woman to work as a prison officer in a male prison. Her final role within the service was as Manager of Christchurch Women's Prison.

Celia now works on a number of projects, all of which are linked to improving the lives of at-risk children and empowering families to find their own solutions to the challenges they face.

She worked on the "Good Man Project" with 25 boys schools throughout New Zealand aimed at creating a working definition of what makes a good man in the 21st century. What arose from the project was a significant insight into the minds of teenage boys and raised some challenging suggestions for parents and the community if they want to see their sons to become the good men they want them to be.

Celia is a great speaker and her talk gives plenty of food for thought and plenty of hints at how to work with teenage boys. Everyone will find something valuable in this talk regardless of whether they have sons or not.
